

In the Abstract

Please substitute the following for the "Abstract" as originally filed.

--A method is disclosed for transmitting long code state information in an asynchronous mobile communication system when performing a handoff from an asynchronous radio network to a synchronous system. The method includes the steps of acquiring handover-related information from a neighboring synchronous system by the asynchronous radio network where the system for a handover is the synchronous system transmitting a first message including activation time information and long code state information to the mobile station by the asynchronous radio network and after receiving the activation time information and the long code state information, making use of the long code state information based on the activation time information by the mobile station.--